Josh has a national OSHA practice, providing training and strategic advice on compliance with workplace safety and health regulations under federal law and state plans. He also defends employers in OSHA litigation in California and across the United States. He is recognized as a thought leader in the area of workplace safety and health.

In addition to his OSHA work, Josh has represented management in traditional labor matters for over 25 years. His practice includes NLRB litigation; collective bargaining; due diligence in connection with corporate mergers and acquisitions; contract interpretation and discharge arbitrations; strikes and secondary boycotts; union campaigns and elections; and related litigation.

Josh's practice encompasses other types of litigation as well, including wage and hour class, collective, and PAGA actions, and defense of whistleblowing, discrimination, and sexual harassment claims. He also is a trusted advisor for technology and other companies navigating California's complex employment regulatory space.

Josh previously served as a judicial law clerk to the Honorable Sandra Brown Armstrong of the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California, and has performed as a trained professional opera singer.
