James F. Shea is a principal and the litigation manager in the Hartford, Connecticut, office of Jackson Lewis P.C. Jim concentrates his practice on employment litigation and preventive counseling. He represents employers in a variety of forums, including state and federal courts, the state and federal departments of labor, the Connecticut Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Jim has been an attorney with Jackson Lewis since 1998.

Jim has successfully represented employers through all stages of litigation – from trials in state and federal courts through appeals before the Connecticut Supreme Court and the Second Circuit Court of Appeals. He has litigated claims alleging discrimination, harassment, wrongful discharge, breach of contract, whistleblower violations and a variety of other statutory and common law claims. He is experienced in handling class and collective actions alleging violations of state and federal wage/hour laws, including claims involving retail managers, insurance claims adjusters and restaurant workers. He has also litigated multi-plaintiff discrimination claims in federal court and before the EEOC.

In addition to his litigation experience, Jim advises employers on a wide range of employment-related issues including reductions-in-force, non-compete agreements and personnel policies. Jim is a frequent speaker and conducts management training on a variety of topics such as harassment prevention, leave and disability law, workplace privacy, and personnel management skills. He has authored articles on workplace law issues that have appeared in the Hartford Business Journal, the Connecticut Law Tribune, The Corporate Counselor and the HR Communicator.
