John A. Snyder is a principal in the New York City, New York, office of Jackson Lewis P.C and co-leader of the firm's Construction & Real Estate industry group. He has extensive experience litigating state and federal discrimination, retaliation, commission and wage and hour, contract, restrictive covenant, executive compensation and whistleblower claims. He also defends management in many other facets of employment-related litigation. In addition, John provides advice, counsel and handles litigation relating to federal, state and local fair housing issues.

John provides advice and counseling on employee hiring and departure issues, drafts restrictive covenant, employment and executive compensation agreements, as well as litigates and handles employment contract, executive compensation and non-competition matters throughout the country.

John has been interviewed and quoted by The Wall Street Journal, Thompson Publishing Group, CCH and CEO Update on employment-related issues. John remains an active alumnus of New York University School of Law and Seton Hall University's W. Paul Stillman School of Business, where he serves as a student mentor. He is a former pupil and barrister of the William J. Brennan Chapter of the American Inns of Court program. While attending law school, John was an editor of the Review of Law and Social Change from 1991-1993.

John is an avid runner, having successfully completed a number of half marathons, marathons and races of other distances.
