Veena's early legal experience was formative of her now client-centered employment practice. While attending law school, Veena was a law clerk at a litigation firm working on complex commercial business matters. Prior to law school, she worked at two prominent litigation firms in San Francisco. Veena also held coveted internships at several governmental agencies at the local, state, and federal levels, including the San Francisco District Attorney's Office, California Department of Justice, and the United States Department of Justice.
