Emi's interest in advocating for employers stems from her background in the hospitality industry. Her experience working in guest service provides a foundation for the excellent service she strives to provide to her clients. Additionally, Emi understands the complex and sensitive relationship between employers and employees, and the evolving nature of employment law in the United States. Emi seeks to build strong partnerships with clients through communication and availability to gain an understanding of the client's history, goals, and industry practices in order to provide an excellent defense for clients in all phases of litigation.
