A key focus of Greg's practice involves assisting clients in navigating emerging issues related to data privacy. As a member of the firm's Privacy, Data, and Cybersecurity group, he has assisted numerous clients with investigating, remediating, and responding to data breaches of various kinds. Greg has assisted clients with developing programs to manage data privacy and security compliance risks under the California Consumer Privacy Act (CCPA), Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA), the New York SHIELD Act, and other data privacy statutes. He has also represented clients in data breach litigation and investigations by government agencies, including the Department of Health and Human Services and state attorneys general.

In addition to data privacy, Greg maintains a robust employment practice, regularly defending employers against claims of discrimination, harassment, and retaliation before federal and state courts and administrative agencies. He also partners with clients on all aspects of their employment relationships, including developing and implementing personnel policies, navigating employee discipline, and conducting workplace investigations.

Prior to joining Jackson Lewis, Greg represented and counseled clients at a boutique labor and employment firm. While attending law school, Greg was a Ronald H. Brown Scholar, and he served as the senior associate editor for the Journal of Civil Rights and Economic Development and the executive publications editor for the Commercial Division Online Law Report.
