

New Jersey Labor Department Issues Companies Stop-Work Orders for Wage Violations

By James M. McDonnell & Justin B. Cutlip

February 24, 2020

Meet the Authors

James M. McDonnell

Principal

908-795-5208

James.McDonnell@jacksonlewis.com

Justin B. Cutlip

Of Counsel

908-795-5136

Justin.Cutlip@jacksonlewis.com

Related Services

Wage and Hour

©2020 Jackson Lewis P.C. This material is provided for informational purposes only. It is not intended to constitute legal advice nor does it create a client-lawyer relationship between Jackson Lewis and any recipient. Recipients should consult with counsel before taking any actions based on the information contained within this material. This material may be considered attorney advertising in some jurisdictions. Prior results do not guarantee a similar outcome.

Focused on labor and employment law since 1958, Jackson Lewis P.C.'s 1000+ attorneys located in major cities nationwide consistently identify and respond to new ways workplace law intersects business. We help employers develop proactive strategies, strong policies and business-oriented solutions to cultivate high-functioning workforces that are engaged, stable and diverse, and share our clients' goals to emphasize inclusivity and respect for the contribution of every employee. For more information, visit <https://www.jacksonlewis.com>.

The New Jersey Department of Labor and Workforce Development (NJDLWD) has announced it has issued two stop-work orders related to alleged violations of state wage laws.

Less than one month after Governor Phil Murphy signed Assembly Bill 5838 into law, the NJDLWD announced alleged violations by a construction company related to purported misclassification of employees as independent contractors and the alleged failure by a tavern to pay wages to its employees. The new law gives the NJDLWD the authority to issue stop-work orders if it determines an employer violated state wage, benefit, or tax law. The NJDLWD must provide seven days' notice of its intent to issue any stop-work order.

The NJDLWD issued the stop-work order against the construction company for violating state statutes on recordkeeping, payroll taxes, workers' compensation insurance, and classification of construction workers. The stop-work order against the tavern stemmed from a prior judgment resulting from an alleged failure to pay wages.

Underscoring the NJDLWD's willingness to utilize its authority to address alleged violations of the state's wage and hour and unemployment laws, the Commissioner commented on these stop-work orders and the agency published its press releases on its website and on social media.

The NJDLWD may issue worker misclassification penalties ranging from $250 per misclassified employee for a first violation and up to $1,000 per misclassified employee for each subsequent violation. The administrative penalty is in addition to a penalty payable to the worker in an amount no more than five percent of the worker's gross earnings over the preceding 12 months.

(New Jersey also requires employers to post a notification on worker misclassification beginning April 1, 2020. See our article, New Jersey Laws Aimed at Misclassification of Independent Contractors.)

Jackson Lewis attorneys will continue to monitor and report on New Jersey's ongoing enforcement efforts. Please contact a Jackson Lewis attorney with any questions.